CHRISTMAS 2024

O' BE JOYFUL

CHANGE...

I love this time of year. I get to spend it with my mom, my kids, and my family from all over. I get so excited – and then I realize that I need to slow down, absorb this time, and cherish it. I am aware that so many of you have had great losses, and these holidays bring back great memories that both lift us up and are very difficult to deal with. It seems just a few years ago my mom was doing all the cooking for Thanksgiving and Christmas, and I didn't know how she kept up. Now, Mom allows my wife Jenny and others to do all the cooking as the torch has been passed.

When you are in your 30's and 40's, you think you are invincible, and getting to the age of 60 seems so old and so far away. Now I can see it sneaking up on me and staring at me in the face. It makes me think... What is the legacy I want to leave for my kids when I am gone? What do I want them to always remember about me?

“It makes me think... What is the legacy I want to leave for my kids when I am gone? What do I want them to always remember about me?”

In recent months, my mother was hospitalized multiple times due to heart complications. Each episode was a stark reminder of the fragility that can accompany our later years. However, amidst these trials, we witnessed an outpouring of kindness from friends and neighbors. Their unwavering support—through meals, visits, and time spent with Mom—provided immense comfort to me and my family. Time with her is precious. Our hugs are longer and intentional. My “I love you’s” to her mean more than words can convey. Every touch of her hand is special to me. I take more pictures of her when I am with her. I am recording her voice to have it forever. I feel the warmth of love coming from her heart through her hands when she grabs mine. We still have small talk about everything, but I am digging into her brain to learn everything I can. I think about what questions I want to ask her now, as if I could never talk with her again. And I listen to her like never before.

As we wind down 2024, I am thankful to each of you as my friend. As Dave Ramsey says, I am doing “better than I deserve.” I have a job I love, co-workers who are like family to me, precious and healthy children, a wife who I adore, and a mother who means the world to me. As we approach the Christmas season, I live and share the hope and promise brought into the world through the birth of Jesus Christ:

"Do not be afraid. I bring you good news that will cause great joy for all the people. Today in the town of David a Savior has been born to you; he is the Messiah, the Lord."

Luke 2:10-11

Thank you all for blessing this small-town country boy with your friendship. Here's to a great 2025!

Cheers!

"My daughter was killed by a drunk driver. The crash hurt my granddaughter too. With John's help will never have to worry about to take care of my granddaughter's earthly and physical needs and education. No one can undo the hurt to our family, but I was thankful John was holding my hand this entire way. Thank you Griffithlaw team. You made this side of it sweet."
